When We Push Things.

It is all we want to make money—says a newspaper prophet. If he is right a good look is encouraging to those who push the story or tack a wheelbarrow, and the boldest have money. We hope it includes razor strops also. At any rate we are bound to keep up the top of the heap whether the popular currency of Tonsorial Parlors remains the same or not.

POOR BLOOD!

Nearly every ailment with which man is afflicted originates in poor blood. Correct that and the cure will follow. Hence

BELL'S SARSAPARILLA

Is the Remedy to do it.

This medicine has been found a valuable preparation for showing that it corrects and restores the blood to the proper tone will bear it out. But the whole has received more testimonials from those who have used it than all others put together. It is used by nearly every family in the land. If you have tried other preparations and been disappointed do not despair. Still keep trying. In the end it will do all we claim for it, or we would not choose to recommend it.

Read the following Statement from one of Bangor's well Known Citizens:

BANGOR, April 16, 1884.

Some fourteen months since I accidentally caught my foot in a cable attached to a sled and was thrown violently to the ground, receiving a severe injury to the right hip and leg. I was confined to the house for months, suffering from lameness, stiffness of the joints, rheumatic pains, etc. I tried different remedies, receiving benefit. Feeling that I needed a blood medicine, I was induced to try BELL'S SARSAPARILLA, which I have taken and found that it has removed the stiffness of the joints, and I am as well as before the accident. Knowing how much this medicine did for me, I can recommend it to all.

Remember the Price:

ONLY 50 CENTS PER BOTTLE.

The National Republican Committee will meet on Tuesday, June 3d, 1884, at 12 o'clock noon, for the purpose of fixing the time and place for holding the next election.

The Republican electors of the several States will be entitled to cast as many votes for President and Vice President as they have Senators and Representatives in Congress. The Republican electors in the several States will meet on the day prescribed by law for the election of electors, and cast their votes for President and Vice President. The Republican electors in the District of Columbia will meet on the first Tuesday after their appointment, and perform the duties required by the laws of the District.

The Republican electors in the several States shall vote for the officers mentioned in the preceding section in the manner prescribed by the laws of the States respectively.

The Republican electors in the District of Columbia shall vote for the officers mentioned in the preceding section in the manner prescribed by the laws of the District.

The Republican electors shall meet at the capital of the State in which they are appointed, and in the District of Columbia they shall meet at the place designated by the Committee on Arrangements of the Republican National Convention, on the first Tuesday after their appointment, at 12 o'clock noon, and shall remain in session until they shall have completed the business of the meeting.

Two delegates at large and one delegate from each Congressional District in the several States, Territories and the District of Columbia, and two delegates at large from each State, Territory and the District of Columbia, to the Republican National Convention to be held in the city of Chicago, Illinois, on Tuesday, the 3d day of June, 1884, at 12 o'clock noon, are hereby called to assemble in said Convention.

Notice of the meeting of the Committee on Arrangements of the Republican National Convention, and of the time and place of holding the Convention, shall be given by the Chairman of the Republican National Committee, by publication in two newspapers of the city of Chicago, Illinois, and by notice to the Chairman of the Republican State Committee of each State, Territory and the District of Columbia, at least sixty days before the meeting of the Convention.

The Republican State Committee of each State, Territory and the District of Columbia shall meet at the capital of their respective States, Territories and the District of Columbia, on Tuesday, the 15th day of April, 1884, at 12 o'clock noon, and select two delegates at large and one delegate from each Congressional District in their respective States, Territories and the District of Columbia, to the Republican National Convention to be held in the city of Chicago, Illinois, on Tuesday, the 3d day of June, 1884, at 12 o'clock noon, and shall certify the names of such delegates to the Chairman of the Republican National Committee.

JOHN A. MARTIN, Secretary.

The Republican National Committee will be in session at the Grand Pacific Hotel, Chicago, Illinois, May 31, 1884.

Androscoggin

William Sheehan was run over by the cars, at Acton, P. Q., on the Grand Trunk railway, Tuesday. Both legs had to be amputated. He lately left Lewiston, where he had been employed in the Bates Mills.

Durham can boast of a smart old lady in the person of Mrs. Hannah Osgood, widow of the late Benj. Osgood of Durham. When a young woman, she spun twenty-one skeins of yarn in a day for Esquire Burnham. In 1866, when 77 years old, she resolved to go to the Golden Gate, going by water and across the Isthmus, which was at that time the shortest route. After a long and tedious journey, she arrived in California. She was said to be the oldest lady that had ever crossed the continent. In 1883 when Mrs. Osgood was 91, she decided to have a farm. She got on board the stage and rode to Eureka, some thirty five miles, to the land office and made a homestead on 160 acres of land. While in Eureka she had her photograph taken, the first one during her long life of 91 years. She mailed several copies of the picture to her friend in Maine. She does not use glasses and is quite vigorous in mind and body. She has two children living in California with whom she has lived. Her son John H. Osgood, when a young man, studied medicine with Dr. Wm. Herrick, son of Jacob Herrick, Esq., of Durham. But when the gold fever broke out, he abandoned his studies, and with a mule crossed the continent. He endured many hardships in the long journey. For several years he worked in the gold mines. He abandoned this and went to ranching, raising stock and grain, harvesting as many as 20,000 bushels.

Aroostook.

Henry Hutchinson, of Moscow, Maine, has bought the C. F. A. Johnson farm in Presque Isle near Aroostook Bridge, recently occupied by Robert Bennett, for $3,000 and has moved on to it.

The starch factory of Collins and Hume's Mars Hill, has been doing a good business, a grinding all the potatoes the farmers had on hand. They have been brought from Easton, Fort Fairfield, Westfield, Bridgewater, Blaine and Mars Hill, keeping the factory well supplied. It is thought the potatoes yielded nearly one large bushel, or starch enough from 1 in the mill.

Rainford Irvin had his leg broken April 8th at Mars Hill, by the sliding of a load of wood which caught and jammed his leg against the cut off end of a log. He has the sympathy of his many friends in his misfortune. He is the third person in this town who has suffered from a broken leg lately.

Republican District Convention.

The Republicans of the Fourth Congressional District of Maine are hereby notified that the Republican Committee of Kennebec County has requested and delegates to a Convention to be held at Temperance Hall in Bangor on Tuesday, the 29th day of April, 1884, at 10 o'clock A. M. for the purpose of nominating a candidate for Representative to the Forty-eighth Congress from said District to the Forty-ninth Congress, and of transacting such other business as may properly come before said Convention.

Each city, town and plantation will be entitled to one delegate and one additional delegate for every seventy votes cast for Governor in said District in 1880, and for each fraction of forty votes exceeding one-half of seventy.

Ward Caucuses.

Ward caucuses next Tuesday afternoon and evening will be held in all the wards of this city. There is no doubt that there will be a full attendance at these caucuses, for the reason that the interest in the coming municipal election is unusually great. The contest for Mayor will be a lively one, and the fight for Aldermen in the wards where the Democrats have a majority will be hotly contested. The Republicans have a good ticket in the field, and will make a vigorous fight. The caucuses will be held at the usual hours and places, and every Republican voter should be present and help to nominate the best men.

The Factionists Badly Left.

The United Labor Bluenoses who went to Washington to oppose the Greenback Convention at Lewiston and fund the Greenbackers in debt, met with a most disgraceful failure. When a resolution was presented in opposition to fusion with the Democrats, who are now completely under the control of the regular Committee on Resolutions made a desperate attempt to kill it, but it was rejected by a vote of 2 to 1. The Committee on Resolutions will report back that they have carefully considered the matter referred to them, and have concluded that it is not expedient to take any action upon the subject, and that the Convention refuse to accept this report and the resolution was adopted. Some of the Republican Factionists who presented Mr. Judd was a candidate for Governor, but as his Democratic boss has often been defeated and always fears to be of the pure bourbon type, the Greenbackers decided to be hoodwinked again and Mr. Judd is badly left. The movement in the United Labor Convention for Governor, Senator and Internal Revenue Collector, in fact electing two delegates-at-large, two alternates, selecting a Republican National Committeeman to be held at Chicago, Illinois, July 22d, 1884, and affirming earlier such other business as may properly come before said Convention.

Dolly's Flirtation.

I am Kitty, and Dolly is my twin sister. I was always sedate, mother used to say, but Dolly was giddy, and fond of flirting. When we were seventeen, Dolly became engaged, with our mother's consent, to Frank Willmot, a young fellow of twenty-four, son of a banker, free and cheery in manner and disposition. He was very indulgent to Dolly, for he felt so confident of her love, and was himself so sincere, that the admiration she excited was his lamp. The freedom with which she received and encouraged it, never palled on him, though mother and I used to watch her with serious anxiety.

Sometimes our mother would say a few impressive words; then Dolly would throw her arms around her, and with kisses assure her she would be a better girl, or at least would put a little, with tears in her bright blue eyes. She would be very demure two days, and at the third worse than ever, scarcely could Frank get a waltz for himself.

One evening he brought to our house a friend of his, a barrister, a man some years older than himself. He was rather famous, though only thirty, being an acute lawyer, and he was consequently looked up to at the bar.

Dolly owned to me that evening that Frank had confided to her that he was to meet his ideal woman.

"Don't blush so angrily, darling," said I, "for it would be the most delightful arrangement. He is Frank's ideal man, and dearest friend. It would be the happiest thing for us all!" And Dolly gave Frank a hug and kiss, and ran off to bed.

Mr. Dacre came very often after that occasion, and I soon found that he was a real man, for he strangely resembled my father, both in manners and child-like courtesy to women, as well as in appearance. It was with a chill at my heart that I saw the first to make the discovery that Dolly was falling in love with Dacre. She, full of hope, seemed bewildered by the arms of his London friend's alliance. So I kept it before he did, but of course not before Dolly, who had a genius for discerning every symptom, however obscure, of dawning love, either her own case or another's.

My mother and Frank were utterly blind to the danger. I was very unhappy, and exceedingly sorry for Dolly, for Frank and Mr. Dacre, and, I own it, for myself, though I had not fallen in love with Frank myself, I must say he was the only man I had seen whom I could fall in love with.

But an accident brought matters to a crisis.

We were sitting in the drawing-room after dinner one evening, when a noise in the street drew us to the window. The door of a carriage had entered the shoulder of a cab horse. Dolly became ill and fainted at the sight, and Mr Dacre, who was beside, threw his arm round her to save her from falling. He led her to a sofa, and stood while Frank drew near, but from that night he never came any more, and I only had seen the half-pensive look in which Dolly's had turned from Frank, had caught another expression on the face, and seen her vivid blush.

Soon after receiving the pleasant confidant, resting to Frank. At first he laughed, that was hurt, and finally the engagement was broken off.

His soon told, but what my mother and I suffered, must be imagined. I dreaded either to tell her the truth, nor to hint to Dolly that I knew to whom her heart was given, though I loved her so dearly, and felt so sure that this was the first true love of her life. Dolly determined, decided, and somewhat stern man, was sure to be in a little but ply. If she noticed him at

Father and I arranged that Dolly should go away on a short visit. Frank was to come one evening, to return the letters Dolly had sent him. They would not be abrupt as of this rupture so much as were placed personally by him in Dolly's hands, and I had his letters also to give. Mother was quite unequal to seeing Dolly, for she loved him dearly, and the blow was left to me. I was not sorry, for felt I could say all that was likely to comfort those loving both of them so deeply.

So poor Frank produced his sorrowful packet, received the one I had for him, and stood leaning against the chimney-piece, while I sat quite unable to utter a word, but with tears dropping quietly on my dress. At last I noticed that he was now Dolly had been faithless to him. He was sure that she and Jack Dacre loved each other, and he spoke so fondly of himself, and it was quite to be expected that his cousin should be preferred above any other man, that I was greatly touched. My tears fell faster and faster.

Jack is the soul of honor, Kitty, but I must make it clear to him that he is free to do as his heart dictates (this said he was happiness must not be wrecked). I will see my father to send me to our branch house in India, and will not return till they are married. Jack is rich enough to marry. I shall embark on Thursday.

Then he charged me with tender messages for Dolly, and, at the door, I could hear my mother to bid him farewell. Presently she glided in pale as death. She held out her trembling hand in silence. Frank folded her in his arms, and she rested on his breast. I stood by, weeping bitterly, and, when we were calmer, Frank embraced us both, tenderly, and pleading for my mother's arms, left us. Poor fellow, how brave he was, how gentle and right!

One month from that time Dolly was married to Mr Dacre, and the marriage was arranged to take place at the beginning of the long vacation. We were by this time convinced that it was the best thing that could happen. No one could or Dolly and doubt that this was the only one she loved. His calm, intense charm impressed her, and her pretty, humble pride in her manly lover, her needs and quiescence, were most promising symptoms of happiness in her married life. Dear mother was so supremely happy, as very fond of my new brother, in itself a power for good and peace to home that we never had been so united before. Frank wrote freely to us, only, patient letters, full of unselfish interest in all around him. His sorrow sweetened, not embittered his character.

He had set himself to alleviate his anguish by doing good, and his first act reaching his destination had been to his keen commercial gifts for the welfare of the widow and children of an officer of the army, and at the cost of time, and energy, to rescue her small fortune from unsafe hands, and invest it profitably. His letters were filled with dear incidents, naturally and simply told, and our affection increased for this truly brave man.

Dolly's grandmother took it into her head that it was her grandchild's duty to pay her a farewell visit before her marriage. Though, as sheilland never troubled herself much about us, we were rather startled at this demand, we all thought it would be best to accept the invitation—for my sister was not looking well—and it was settled that she should go and spend a month with the old lady in her lovely north country home. Mr. Dacre was pressed to go as often as his professional engagements would permit, so Dolly left in pretty good spirits, in charge of the elderly servant who was our substitute for a regular ladies' maid.

She wrote to tell us how she was enjoying the rejoicing beauty of the country. Mr. Dacre had managed to run down from Saturday till Monday at the end of the first week, and had of course made a great impression, but was afraid he could not come again—a long case was pending at Westminster. The letter which follows is this, I give in its integrity:

Hfonwood, July 20.

Dearest Kitty,—I hope you will get this in time to send my chat here [illegible] of the grandmamma's. I am on a fortnight's visit to Lady Millicent North. Such a charming woman—a widow about twenty-eight years old. She persuaded Mrs. Lloyd to let her have me for a week or two; and, as her daughter-in-law is confirmed invalid, was coming to spend just that time with her, my grandmother was glad to get me out of her way, I know, can't write much, for the post leaves here at eight o'clock, and we drop our letters into the hall-box, as we go in to dinner. I expect the gong every minute. This place is lovely, and the new baronet—Sir Charles—is the dearest.—The gong. Your DOLLY.

I felt uneasy concerning this letter. I was sorry Dolly should have left her good mother's quiet home, just as she was so beautifully growing and growing such a thoughtful little love. It might unsettle her again to pass a fortnight in a country house with a fascinating baronet; and I knew Jack Dacre would never permit, never pardon the smallest suspicion of flirting. He had pardoned her defection in Frank's case, for Frank himself had pleaded eloquently, saying that she was very young, so naturally affectionate. But mamma and I felt sure that not for one hour would he permit the slightest approach to disloyalty to his deep tenderness for his girlish bride. Neither her youth, her love of fun, nor her merry heart, would plead one atom in her favor; so I read this letter with a heavy heart. My answer was as follows:

Dearest Dolly,—Your letter reached me in time to have the box sent to Highwood. You will receive it soon after this reaches you. Write very fully, for your letters are delightful. Send me a full description of everything, for you have roused my curiosity to go to Sir Charles' who is the dearest.

The rest of my letter contained home news, and I feel I must transcribe it. But Dolly's answer I will transcribe.
